TISOH unveils special events design lab

LAS VEGAS – The International School of Hospitality (TISOH) this month unveils its newly reimagined special events design lab. This innovative element of the state-of-the-art campus is an ever-changing special events space, featuring the latest in event décor and lighting. Lenny Talarico CSEP, CHE, Executive Director of Events at MGM Resorts Event Productions, generously donates his time and expertise to oversee the creative designs for the lab.

“This lab is a special resource for our students that allows for a rich hands-on experience with colors, décor and themes, and where they can learn from the best in the business about how to effectively create and design world-class meetings, events and weddings,” said Timothy M. Lam, Executive Director of TISOH.

The design lab roomscape features donations from MGM Resorts Event Productions, Earth Water Sky, AFR Event Furnishings, Chameleon Chairs, Classic Party Rentals and Cloth Connection. This generous participation is testament to the companies’ commitment to high quality education and training for future hospitality professionals.

In the 12 years since its founding, The International School of Hospitality has seen growing demand for its programs as industry leaders seek qualified hospitality professionals locally, nationally and globally.

Las Vegas is the king of conventions with 23 consecutive years as North America’s number one convention destination as reported by the Las Vegas Conventions and Visitor Authority. With the volume of events associated with conventions, Las Vegas provides strong opportunities for students both for learning and for career placement.
